Markets, macro and the cost of temporary accommodation

AGENDA

10:30 Introduction

Mike Thatcher, editorial director, Room151

10:30 Macro economic outlook

What are the latest signals on economic growth, inflation and interest rates? What are the possible impacts of turbulent international geopolitical events?

Heather Lamont, director, client investments, CCLA

10:50: The finance panel

What is the financial impact on local authorities of providing temporary accommodation?

The number of rough sleepers is decreasing, but the cost of providing temporary accommodation to local authorities is on the rise. Often the beneficiary of this spend are private landlords providing poor quality housing. What impact does homelessness and temporary accommodation have on council budgets? How is local government funding temporary accommodation? What are the longer-term solutions to the temporary housing crisis and what are the financial models that support them?

Cecilie Booth, director of resources and s151 officer, Peterborough City Council

John Dunn, property fund development manager, Resonance Limited

Omar Al-Hasso, managing director, Phi Capital Investments

11:30 Close of Webinar

As always there is plenty of opportunity to send in the questions you would like to see discussed either before or during the briefing.
